SUBJECT: Operations and Agents of Leitstelle II SM-Ost für Frontaufklärung.

TO: S.O., I-2 Germany

Introduction

Leitstelle II SM-Ost, established in August 1944 in Vienna, descended directly from Abwehr II Vienna and from a certain number of other groups that the rapid advance of the Russian Army in Central Europe had very quickly and almost completely destroyed. It was necessary for the German intelligence and sabotage services to resume contact with the newly-occupied countries and to attempt, on the one hand, to establish relations with what remained of the old networks, and, on the other hand, to form new groups for intelligence and sabotage destined to aid the coming German counter-offensive which seems doubted, officially at least, would take place in the near future.

This last point is very important if the true nature of the operations which were attempted between August 1944 and April 1945 and the weakness of the system are to be understood. In fact, despite the turn of military events on all fronts, the official position, according to which victory would surely reward the efforts of the German people, forbade anyone to take measures providing for a German defeat, at least in an organization of this type which was very suspect in the eyes of pure Nazis. The networks of the Leitstelle are not, therefore, technically stay-behind networks despite the fact that the agents were operating behind the Russian lines.

There was, consequently, a psychological handicap at the basis of the activities of the Leitstelle reflecting the contradiction of the situation within Germany.

In addition there was a more serious difficulty. The Leitstelle represented under a different name the former Abteilung II of the Abwehr and the great majority of its personnel came from that organization which had been dissolved by the Nazis in May 1944 and which the events of July 1944 had discredited in the eyes of the Nazis. If this state of mind is taken into consideration and also the fact that NSMA Amt VI B, Mil Amt B and S Jagdverbände SM-Ost had a technical and geographic sphere very similar to that of the Leitstelle and also had the confidence of the authorities in power, it will be seen that the position of the Leitstelle was anything but brilliant.

To these difficulties of a general order must be added those brought about by the relations of the Leitstelle vis-à-vis the Army and the Nazi Party. In reality, the title of the Leitstelle is: "Leitstelle II SM-Ost für Frontaufklärung". Following the changes at Salzburg in May 1944 it had been agreed that the Frontaufklärung and Informationsgruppe would remain under the name of the Leitstelle. The Informationsgruppe was a group of the Army and the Frontaufklärung was a group of the Nazi Party.

SCHWENDI. (This information was furnished by Major GARNER.) The BSHA, however, did not give up the idea of absorbing the remaining elements of the old Abwehr which were still outside its authority and in the end the Frontaufklärung was absorbed into BSHA Mil Amt F which thus became the sole authority with the right to issue orders of a technical nature (Fachliche Befehlsgewalt). The OKW retained only a vague disciplinary power. Nevertheless, the conflict between the Army and the Party remained unsettled and was not resolved except by an order of KALTENBRUNNER toward the end of February 1945.

At that time the very existence of the Leitstelle was in doubt. The efforts of SKORZENY to obtain complete control of sabotage operations seemed about to succeed and Mil Amt VI E, through AUHER, chief of Referat Roumania Mil Amt VI E, notified PIFF, chief of Referat Roumania of the Leitstelle, that henceforth Mil Amt VI E had complete control of operations for Roumania and that PIFF was not to initiate any action without first referring it to AUHER. To corroborate this new authority AUHER forbade the execution of Operation GILL which was already to leave for Roumania. Finally, at the end of April, to ratify this power an order arrived at Pertisau in the Tyrol (the evacuation center of the Leitstelle) to turn over without delay to Major LOCH, deputy chief of Mil Amt D, all documents concerning the operations and agents of the Leitstelle which had not been previously destroyed. This order was not carried out.

When Germany surrendered the Leitstelle had practically ceased to exist. This was true not only for the staff and the services of the Leitstelle but also for the networks of agents.

During the nine months of its existence the Leitstelle had two functions. First, it was charged with maintaining contact with the old networks in the Balkans formerly under Gruppe II of Abwehrstelle Vienna and the Abwehrstelle of the Balkan countries such as Bucharest and Belgrade. Second, the Leitstelle was to build up by means of special operations (Unternehmen) networks capable of sending intelligence, of preparing an atmosphere favorable to the counter-attack of the Wehrmacht and also of assuring the success of that counter-offensive when it took place. To achieve success in these special enterprises the Leitstelle was either to recruit the necessary personnel directly or to address its requests to the Frontaufklärungskommando and Frontaufklärungstruppe which were subordinate to it although tactically responsible to Army Groups and Armies to which the PAKs and SAFs were attached. In addition, there were under the Leitstelle certain missions of a defensive nature such as the "Balkanabwehr", the purpose of which was to warn of any act of sabotage which could stop traffic on the Danube.

In addition the Leitstelle received the information concerning "action jump" operations of the PAKs and SAFs which were under the jurisdiction of the Leitstelle or organized by groups which were working in territories related to the operations of the Leitstelle before the German defeat in Europe. For example, Gruppe II of Akt Bucharest; Gruppe I of RIKARD and GRANIS; or Unternehmen BRITON which was organized by Abwehrstelle Sofia. These sabotage, arms and intelligence operations in Yugoslavia, Roumania, Bulgaria and Greece were to be carried out in case of necessity.

not been used up to the moment of the German capitulation. The documents were recovered with the capture of the Leitstelle personnel at Pertisan on 3 June 1945.

Work within the Leitstelle was divided among a certain number of referats which each had a geographic area of its own with technically the same mission. All the work of the three referats was supervised by Hauptmann ZIEGLER, chief of operations, who was directly under Oberstleutnant FECHNER.

Operations and Agents of Referat FA1

This Referat was directed by Leutnant TUMMLER assisted by Leutnant Hans BAUER (Low at Third U.S. Army IO). The jurisdiction of the Referat included Bulgaria and Macedonia, the latter at that time taken over by Bulgaria. At the beginning, to carry out its missions, the Referat had FAX 205 which was later moved to Slovakia.

The mission of the Referat was first, to maintain contact with the network established by Unternehmen TRITON, and second, to organize Unternehmen BAR which was to supplement TRITON.

1. TRITON

Originally this operation, directed by Oberstleutnant FECHNER, had ~~counterespionage~~ its only mission, namely, protecting the shipments of chrome across Bulgaria. Its headquarters were at the Wirtschaftstelle Sofia. TRITON was directly under the Kriegsorganisation Bulgaria.

During the summer of 1943 an order arrived from OKW Abwehr II stating that, under cover of the Wirtschaftstelle, a number of sabotage, arms and food dumps should be established in Bulgaria and Macedonia and that small groups of agents should be set up to maintain contact in case of a German retreat. The agents were also to work for the return of the Germans. For the success of this operation Bulgaria was divided into five regions and an officer or an NCO was made responsible for each region. The results were not very encouraging. Only one radio agent established and maintained contact after the German retreat. In fact, the officers responsible, who were careless and pressed for time, reported agents who did not exist to Berlin. These charts of imaginary networks of Unternehmen TRITON were recovered among the documents of the Leitstelle and sent to the SHAEF Counter Intelligence War Room in London.

The only well-organized region was No. IV, Macedonia under Leutnant TUMMLER. The network of agents in this region was centred in the towns of Skopje and Kacanik. Its chief was a certain DSCORSEWITSCH (phonetic) alias MILAN, a silversmith in the Mohammedan quarter of Skopje. Most of his agents were Mohammedans. The radio operator for the network was KARAMANOFF (phonetic) alias KAMIL. He had received his training with the Nachrichten Regiment 506 near Vienna during the fall of 1943 and was recruited by TUMMLER. He had maintained radio contact until October 1944 without sending any messages because the German troops were still occupying Bulgaria. He transmitted messages from November 1944 to April 1945 when the German controls ceased its monitoring.

group directed by MILAN and in addition to report on all important events of a political, economic and social nature. Between October 1944 and April 1945 he sent about twenty messages. He transmitted on an average of twice a week. In the radio documents of the Leitstelle found in the mountains near Pertuisen after the arrest of FECHNER, ZIEGLER, PIFF, NOVAK and BAUER, KANIL's radio plan was found but, for some unknown reason, without the call signs. According to this plan, KANIL was in contact with WALD, the auxiliary centrale of WERA, and later with VIENE, the evacuation centrale of WERA, located at Obing in Bavaria.

At the end of February the Leitstelle thought that KANIL was controlled by the Russians and, in fact, he had transmitted the signal arranged for in case he operated under enemy control: "Grüss an den Chef". From later messages, however, it was discovered that there had been a misunderstanding. KANIL was only signaling that the Russian counter-espionage services made his job very difficult. KANIL was the only serious agent of the TRITON group according to Hauptmann ZIEGLER who thinks it would be possible to re-establish contact with him by courier if not by radio.

BOGORSEWITSCH (phonetic) alias MILAN: 1m64; heavy; round face; very devout Mohammedan; Albanian nationality; speaks Greek, Turkish and Albanian.

KARAMANOFF (phonetic) alias KANIL: 1m72; 27 years old; thin; brown hair; Mohammedan; merchant in Skopje; strongly anti-communist.

2. BAB

The inefficiency of the German networks in Bulgaria necessitated the preparation of another operation by the Leitstelle which would permit the employment of the good elements of the existing network and also correct the errors of the preceding operation. This was the reason for the creation of Unternehmen BAB. Lieutenant BAUER, at that time chief of Referat PA1, organized this operation during the autumn of 1944.

Ten agents were recruited from volunteers of the anti-communist Bulgarian movement in Vienna which was known as the Organisation Legionär. These agents were all students who came from the Bulgarian middle class. As usual the radio training of the agents was undertaken by Nachrichten Regiment 506. Two of the agents NEDELKOFF and DRAGANOFF were trained at a villa in HEDLING near Vienna and the others at Hinterbrühl near HEDLING. Instruction was mainly concerned with radio. All the students were members of a political group. German was the language employed as all the students spoke it. It was arranged, however, that certain ones would use the Bulgarian cyrillic alphabet.

There were two instructors, one a radio operator from WERA, Wachmeister Franz HOHN and the other a Bulgarian, NIKOLAI (phonetic) who was more particularly in charge of military training. The training lasted longer for political reasons than originally provided for. Hinterbrühl was threatened by the Russian advance in April and the center was presented to a Lalet near Kirchberg in the Tyrol (in the Kitzbühl area). Because of these delays four agents were not able to leave and were sent back to the Organisation Legionär at Duellera near Vienna in April 1945. They were Boris DINOLOV alias BEN, Theodor DINOLOV alias TEDDY, Dimitar NOPEFF alias NERZ and General STAINOFF alias STUBS.

The agents were distributed according to the five Bulgarian zones as they had been defined at the time of Operation TRITON.

Zone I (Zone I). This zone was bounded on the north by the Danube, on the south by the Balkans, on the west by the railroad line Sofia-Pirot, and on the east by a line going north and south passing approximately through Rasgrad.

Lieutenant Boris NEDELKOFF alias NORMANN was parachuted into this zone in the mountains of Margash 50 kms north-east of Sofia at the end of October 1944. NEDELKOFF had left Bulgaria after the arrival of the Russians and had crossed the German lines after having organized a group of anti-communist partisans of about sixty members. The group was located near Margash in the region where NEDELKOFF was later dropped. He had not been given radio training. He was parachuted at the same time as arms, clothing, food and money for his group. He had been given from 10 to 15 French gold pieces of 20 franc denomination and from 80,000 to 100,000 levas. Kommando KLARA, a special aviation unit, was responsible for the operation as it was for all the agents of the Leitstelle.

Until December 1944 NEDELKOFF had no means of communication. After his brother, Doitschin NEDELKOFF, and DRAGANOFF, both W/T operators, were dropped NEDELKOFF sent an average of two messages a week, a total of from twenty-five to thirty messages in all. He was to report on all outstanding political, economic and social events of importance. He had received definite orders not to undertake any sabotage or active resistance without precise orders from the German military authorities. He never received such orders. He was to develop an anti-communist movement organization in Bulgaria and was to report on the progress of this movement. The Leitstelle had promised to assist NEDELKOFF as much as possible during hostilities but nothing had been planned in case of a German defeat. Hauptmann ZIEGLER believes, however, that NEDELKOFF is still active and that his anti-communist group probably has a membership of several thousands.

Zone II (Zone II). This zone is in central Bulgaria, bounded on the north by the Balkans, on the south by the Rhodope Mountains, on the west by the old Bulgarian-Yugoslavian frontier, and on the east by an extension of a line going north and south through Rasgrad.

Two agents with the aliases NERO and DIO were parachuted in this zone 60 kms south east of Vidin in northern Bulgaria at the beginning of December 1944. They had two W/T transmitting and receiving sets, one a battery set and the other for electric current. Each agent had been given 50 gold pieces (French twenty franc pieces), 100,000 levas and 50 American dollars; one

The feed was destined for Boris HEDERIKOFF alias NORMAN, brother of HERO whose real name was Deitchin HEDERIKOFF. The latter received his radio training at Berlin and proved to be an excellent V/T operator. HERO's mission was to contact his brother and place himself under his orders. He was to transmit in Bulgarian. Together with DIO, he was to send meteorological reports.

DIO, whose real name was BRAGANOFF, was recruited by Boris HEDERIKOFF, as was HERO, and received his training with HERO. DIO had the same mission and was parachuted at the same time as the latter.

The radio documents concerning DIO and HERO were recovered among the papers of the Leitstelle.

Zone III (Zone III). This zone is in the Black Sea area, bounded on the north by the Bulgarian frontier, on the south by the Turkish frontier, on the west by a line going north and south through Rasgrad, and on the east by the Black Sea.

Three agents, two of whom were V/T operators, were dropped together between Sliven and Burgas in this zone at the beginning of March 1945. One was GUGUTSCHKOFF (phonetic) alias NIKLO who had been given a transmitter-receiver set which worked on a battery, twenty gold pieces (French 20 franc pieces), 100,000 levass, a machine gun, two pistols and two or three grenades. GUGUTSCHKOFF had as his mission to make contact with the Organisation Legionnaire through Nitke (?) HANBAROFF alias NIKSIN, one of the leading members of the Bulgarian anti-communist movements and who had been established in his position at the time of Operation TRITON. NIKSIN had been an inspector in the Bulgarian secret police and undoubtedly has been in hiding since the Russian occupation. At the beginning of the beginning of April, after he was parachuted, GUGUTSCHKOFF made contact with the centrale WIESE at Obing but he had not sent a report before the dissolution of the centrale at Obing. Hauptmann LIEBNER believes that GUGUTSCHKOFF can still be contacted although nothing had been arranged for in case of a German defeat.

The second of the three agents was Pierre KRATSCHEFF alias NIKKI and the third agent was DOITSCHKINOFF alias NORMAN. Both these agents were parachuted with GUGUTSCHKOFF and had the same training, equipment and mission as he.

The radio plan for GUGUTSCHKOFF and KRATSCHEFF was found among the Leitstelle radio documents in the mountains near Pertisau. In addition GUGUTSCHKOFF is mentioned in the radio plan of the station established at the beginning of May 1945 on the Lampon-Joch near Pertisau and which was supposed to maintain contact with certain agents.

Zone IV (Macedonia) and Zone V (Mediterranean area) were not provided with agents. The four agents, mentioned above who were trained for Zone IV did not finish their training until later and were sent back to the Bulgarian Organisation Legionnaire.

The information on PA1 was obtained from BAUER and ZIEGLER. FUMLER, whose interrogation will be more exhaustive, has not yet been arrested as far as we know. All the documents mentioned above have been sent to SHARP CI War Room, London.

Operations and Agents of Referat PA2

This Referat was under the orders of Lieutenant BRÜGGEBOS. Under his jurisdiction were Yugoslavia and Greece and to carry out the missions Frontaufklärungskommando 201 and Frontaufklärungstruppe 215, 214, 221, 223 and 219 were to be employed. As BRÜGGEBOS is still at liberty, as far as we know, our knowledge of the operations of this referat is fragmentary.

This referat was organised into three unternehmen.

1. ALGOL

In January 1945 FAX 201 sent one of the Bulgarian nationalist leaders CAFER DEVA with a group of twenty Albanians to the Leitstelle at Vienna. This group asked moral support by means of propaganda for the Albanian nationalists. It was arranged that anti-communist tracts, translated into Albanian, would be dropped in Albania but it was not planned to send any agents. ZIEGLER is unable to say whether this operation took place or not and none of the other members of the Leitstelle at present in our hands is able to give any information on the operation.

1. POLIUX

This operation was designed to establish a net-the execution of POLKX depended to the operation except to arrange the parachuting with Kommande KLAJA. At the end of December 1944, a number of agents were dropped, but by error they jumped 150 kms from the agreed point which was in the region northeast of Salomika. The agents were arrested by the British.

3. VUK

This operation was concerned with organizing a group of Serb nationalists under the Serbian Minister LJOTIC. Its purpose was to combat communism. Practically, PAK 201 was responsible for the operation with the assistance of the Leitstelle. LJOTIC was killed accidentally in February 1945.

VUK I. A group of twenty Serbs was to stay behind the lines after the German retreat with a Serb radio operator to maintain contact. No message was transmitted or, at least was not received.

VUK II. Thirty Serb partisans of LJOTIC were trained at a camp in Kaiserwald near Graz. The names of two members of the group are known: Oberleutnant LENHAG, a Serb, and Lieutenant VUENSCHE, a German. VUENSCHE was parachuted in January 1945 in the mountains of the region around Homlje with a W/T transmitter. The fate of the group is not known.

VUK III. At the same time as VUK II, thirty other Serbs were in training at Kaiserwald. They were to be parachuted later but the operation never took place and they returned to the Serb Legion near Trieste.

Leutnant BRÜGGEBOSS is evidently the only member of the Leitstelle who would be in a position to furnish information on these operations.

Among the radio documents of the Leitstelle were found the radio plans of four agents all operating in Yugoslavia, of whom three were under Oberleutnant BRÜGGEBOSS; (the names given to the agents are those of their posts) KALMAN, who transmitted in Serb and who was in the region of Kopaonik. KALMAN had two W/T sets. BRÜGGEBOSS is described on KALMAN's radio plan as the führende offizier; ALGOI I, the radio plan dated 3 March 1945 states that the agent was to be parachuted 23 March 1945 and the station, theoretically, was to be in the region of Shoplje. The messages were to be translated into German. The führende offizier was BRÜGGEBOSS; BLAGO, the radio plan dated 31 January 1945 and the language used was Serb. The region of operation was Kopaonik. This agent was to send tactical and meteorological information. BRÜGGEBOSS was again führende offizier; DUJAN, the station was to operate in the region of Belgrade. The agent had two W/T sets. The name of BRÜGGEBOSS is not mentioned.

4. KINO

This operation was to attempt to sabotage on a large scale the Allied gasoline dumps in the Middle East. It is rather difficult to ascertain in what way the Leitstelle was connected with this operation which never took place. The only Leitstelle officer concerned with KINO was Leutnant BRÜGGEBOSS.

Operations and Agents of Referat FA3

This Referat was under the orders of Lieutenant Alfred PIFF, whose jurisdiction extended to Roumania and Hungary. For the execution of his operations PIFF employed FAK 206 and FAKs 201, 204, 213, 202 and 250.

The Referat organized the following special operations:

1. URANUS I

This undertaking was begun before the Leitstelle existed and was completely carried out by FAK 205. The only part the Leitstelle played in the operation was to receive the documents pertaining to it. These documents have been recovered and sent to the War Room. The operation was concerned with the establishment of sabotage, arms and food depots in Hungary.

2. URANUS II

This operation was concerned with building an anti-communist resistance movement in Hungary. All preparations for URANUS II were made by FAK 206, the Leitstelle merely supervising. Agents were recruited and trained but never placed.

3. REGULUS

About the 20 September 1944 PIFF was ordered to organize an operation for Roumania which was to be known by the code name REGULUS. The purpose of the operation was to infiltrate agents into Roumania who were to create an atmosphere favorable to the German counter-offensive, to reform the anti-communist nationalist groups and to send political, economic, social and military information. They were strictly forbidden to commit any acts of sabotage, a prerogative of SKORZENY's.

In order to obtain the necessary personnel for this undertaking, PIFF, on orders from Oberstleutnant FECHNER, was to get in touch with Horia SIMA, chief of the Roumanian Iron Guard at that time at the Hotel Imperial, Vienna. SIMA had 360 Iron Guard members at his disposition. These men had recently been liberated from Buchenwald where they had been interned for two years because of the conflict between SIMA and ANTONESCU. The latter had been backed by the Germans. SIMA agreed to put some of his men at the disposition of PIFF, although expressing surprise that so many people were asking aid of him. In fact, SKORZENY, a short time before, had made a similar request and had recruited 150 men.

A group of fifteen men was put at the disposal of the Leitstelle and PIFF turned them over to Oberstleutnant HOTZEL of Nachrichten Regiment 506 for training as radio operators. They began their training on 26 September 1944 at Kreitenfurt near Vienna. At the beginning of October when it became evident that the agents would be ready to leave on their missions by the end of November, PIFF again got in touch with SIMA in order to obtain supplementary personnel who were to be formed into groups and parachuted separately, each group with two W/T operators and a certain number of agents. PIFF obtained thirty-seven agents from SIMA. They were trained by Lehrregiment Kurfürst at

...near Berlin. The instruction was particularly...
...special preparation for their missions and with...
...handling of explosives. As all these agents were already...
...specialists in political subversion, that part of the training...
...omitted.

In the middle of November 1944 all the agents were...
...brought to Breitenfurt. There were fifty-one agents in all, of...
...whom fourteen were W/T operators. Three potential radio operators...
...had been eliminated during the training course. FIFT then...
...got in touch with Kommando KLARA (Gruppe I of Luftgeschwader...
...200) which was located at the Wiener-Neustadt airport. Kommando...
...KLARA was responsible for parachuting agents.

When everything had been arranged with the Kommando...
...FIFT returned to Breitenfurt with SIMA and organized the agents...
...into seven groups. Each group was made up of two W/T operators...
...with a transmitting-receiving set of battery type No. 109/5. Each...
...agent was given five gold pieces and 300,000 leis. The agents of...
...Groups III, VI, and VII received in addition 5000...
...roubles as they were to be parachuted into a region of Roumania...
...where roubles were used as currency. In addition, they received...
...items which could be used in exchange for food, such as lighters...
...and flints, and saccharine. Each agent had a 45 pistol and each...
...group had two Walther PPK 32s with silencers. Each agent had a...
...Beretta machine gun and each radio operator a wrist watch. They...
...also had enough explosive to destroy their equipment if the need...
...arose.

GROUP I

This group was made up of six agents. The head of the...
...group, VERGA, was also one of the radio operators. The other...
...W/T operator was Nicolae BALANESCU; another agent of the group...
...was CODILA. The name of the radio station was STUHA. They were...
...to work south of Banat and were to be parachuted 50 kms southeast...
...of Lugoj. They were dropped during the night 9-10 December 1944...
...and by error landed 50 kms to the east of the town. Their radio...
...was damaged in the landing but they succeeded a few days later...
...in making contact with another group PRINZ EUGEN which trans-...
...mitted their messages to the centrale at Vienna. At the landing...
...two members of the group were separated from the others and...
...taken into the village of Meria. Some shots were exchanged with the...
...Roumanian police but they succeeded in escaping and rejoined the...
...rest of the group. They then went toward the valley of the river...
...Tisza where they were supposed to have been parachuted. BALANES-...
...CU took the transmitter to Timisoara (Temesvar) to be repaired...
...by an electrician. BALANESCU was arrested by the Roumanian...
...police probably for a reason that had nothing to do with the...
...fact that he was a W/T operator. He managed to escape two days...
...later. The receiver was repaired and the station PRINZ EUGEN...
...continued to maintain contact with the centrale.

As Group II (MALEKI) and Group III (MARIAN) also had...
...trouble with their radios the Leitstelle decided to send...
...new sets and radio plans to the three groups. The operation...
...took place 11 March 1945 but the aircraft did not find...
...agreed on for the parachuting and crashed on its return to...
...Wiener-Neustadt. The operation was repeated successfully...
...13 March. Three transmitters were dropped: STUHA III,...

STUNA III, STUNA III and MARZAN III made almost immediate contact with the centrale but MAISKI was never heard. At the beginning of 1945 STUNA announced that it would maintain the transmission, the set of the latter having been damaged at the time of the parachuting. From then on STUNA sent messages almost daily and the location of the station was never changed. The station was located in Roumania and the messages were mainly concerned with information about the anti-communist movement in the country. According to STUNA, the movement was made up of about three thousand active members with at least one representative in every village. STUNA also sent some military information although not trained for that. This station was included in the list of agents which the Leitstelle was to contact from its centrale located on the Lampsen Joch at a height of 2600 meters.

While the mortars were near Bremer at an altitude of about 1200 meters, they made contact with and employed a group of German prisoners who had escaped from the Russians. Their some of ammunition was the similar-Bremer region. One of their messages said that their V/2 set had been damaged by the cold and it was decided to send them a new battery. Contact with the group was broken. However, and through CS007 VII (LOA) the Leitstelle learned that in the middle of February 1945 the group HUEB had had a fight with the Romanian police but that all the members had escaped.

This group was made up of eight agents, the chief of whom was JOVIE. The radio operators were Niccolai POFESCU and GIUPLA. POLISTIU and FIFIANU were also members of the group. They landed 90 kms west of Brasov instead of to the south west. The code name of their station was LOPA. They established contact about fifteen days after their arrival and after they had reached the region of the oil wells of Ploesti and the neighborhood of Iasi where they were supposed to operate. This group quickly established an excellent network which supplied the best political information received by the Gestapo. GIUPLA at one time sent a message saying that he had been contacted by a British agent, who, because of the close watch kept by the Russians, was unable to accomplish anything and was anxious to employ members of the Iron Guard. FIFU told GIUPLA to refrain from mixing in the affair.

1208A, having lost its calibration cd., sent a message through one of the stations of Moffett Boulevard of Art VI in the Southwest region. ARNEM, chief of the reformat, re-transmitted the message to P177 and received P177's response. At the end of the twenty the station broke off after having announced the arrest of the affair.

That 19 December 1944, a radio message was received from Group South to the 13th Communications Group and to the 1st Army, drawing attention to the fact that in certain regions of the front there were German prisoners who had escaped from the front lines in need of assistance. An order was issued to send a radio message to help the prisoners. FUCHSBERG ordered PIFF to get in contact with GINA in order to obtain the necessary personnel. FUCHSBERG, three of his men and his radio operator, PIFF, a signal operator, MAUERBERGER of Nachrichten Regiment 106 and two members of the German W/Z operator, Gertfried FUCHSBERG, PIFF and two other members of the line squad, KUNZMICHIGAS and von KUNZMICHIGAS, a group was dropped during the night of 17-18 December 1944, south of the front and they began to cautiously advance toward the landing. They never found the so-called group of prisoners. On the other hand they succeeded in establishing contact with Group STUJA and later with MARLIN. They maintained radio contact until the end. The centrals in the mountains still received the signal of PIFF 194422.

of the operation. At the beginning of April 1944, the German High Command sent twenty-five men, who were sent to the Balkans for training as radio technicians and set the entire team ready to leave. They were given twelve or thirteen transmitters, one of which was very powerful. However, they did not leave because Komando ELBA had no more gasoline for its airplanes and, in addition, Ant VI 2 in the person of ARMBURG forbade the undertaking on the pretext that all radio operations in the Balkans were exclusively the business of Ant VI 2.

All radio plans of Operation EISENBERG have been recovered and sent to the War Room.

2. EISENBERG

This undertaking was assigned to PAK 505 and later to PAK 217 under Lieutenant SCHMIDT of the Leitstelle was responsible for supervision of EISENBERG and he spent all of his time on it after he was attached to PAK 217 in December 1944.

CONCLUSION

This summary does not attempt to give a complete picture of all of the activities and undertakings of Leitstelle II PAK-207 but rather it attempts to give as faithful a picture as possible of the achievements of this organization as seen in operation. The information contained in this report is derived principally from the interrogations of Hauptmann EISENBERG (concerning Bulgaria), Lieutenant FIF (concerning Operation EISENBERG), Lieutenant MAUER (concerning Operation VII), and of Oberleutnant FUCHER. The documents which were recovered with the aid of EISENBERG have been used only slightly because of their purely technical nature.

This summary should, however, be sufficient to establish that the radio networks of the Leitstelle seem as a whole arose from the same necessity. Despite lack of information on the German networks, the same is probably true for them. In fact, among the documents recovered, there is a reference from EISENBERG which is nothing more than the radio plan for the centrally installed at the beginning of May on the Longhorn-John near Partium. This plan was to include all the radio agents when the Germans thought it was still possible to contact at the moment of the surrender. The plan includes all stations: PAK 207, STVA 3, MAUER, MAUER, MAUER and MAUER four in Romania, one in Bulgaria and one in Serbia. It is necessary, however, to eliminate two of the German stations: MAUER, in fact, never transmitted and MAUER never sent a message directly, its call signal having been intercepted only once. MAUER established contact with the centrally located German agents. Concerning MAUER there is not enough information. It should be noted, however, that this plan does not limit the German stations, such as MAUER, which at that period could have been contacted. Judging from the facts as provided by the documents, the Leitstelle these networks were more or less in a state of liquidation at the time of the German surrender, certain individual stations were able to survive but the system as a whole was dismantled. The networks were not set up to carry on by themselves; they were established with the idea that the network would return in strength. This fact is particularly obvious in the case of the choice of the Bulgarian agents, for the most part notorious of the German High Command. The German High Command sent twenty-five men, who were sent to the Balkans for training as radio technicians and set the entire team ready to leave. They were given twelve or thirteen transmitters, one of which was very powerful. However, they did not leave because Komando ELBA had no more gasoline for its airplanes and, in addition, Ant VI 2 in the person of ARMBURG forbade the undertaking on the pretext that all radio operations in the Balkans were exclusively the business of Ant VI 2.

All radio plans of Operation EISENBERG have been recovered and sent to the War Room.

This undertaking was assigned to PAK 505 and later to PAK 217 under Lieutenant SCHMIDT of the Leitstelle was responsible for supervision of EISENBERG and he spent all of his time on it after he was attached to PAK 217 in December 1944.

This summary does not attempt to give a complete picture of all of the activities and undertakings of Leitstelle II PAK-207 but rather it attempts to give as faithful a picture as possible of the achievements of this organization as seen in operation. The information contained in this report is derived principally from the interrogations of Hauptmann EISENBERG (concerning Bulgaria), Lieutenant FIF (concerning Operation EISENBERG), Lieutenant MAUER (concerning Operation VII), and of Oberleutnant FUCHER. The documents which were recovered with the aid of EISENBERG have been used only slightly because of their purely technical nature.

This summary should, however, be sufficient to establish that the radio networks of the Leitstelle seem as a whole arose from the same necessity. Despite lack of information on the German networks, the same is probably true for them. In fact, among the documents recovered, there is a reference from EISENBERG which is nothing more than the radio plan for the centrally installed at the beginning of May on the Longhorn-John near Partium. This plan was to include all the radio agents when the Germans thought it was still possible to contact at the moment of the surrender. The plan includes all stations: PAK 207, STVA 3, MAUER, MAUER, MAUER and MAUER four in Romania, one in Bulgaria and one in Serbia. 2. He is a professional soldier. In the last war he th the Austro-Hungarian Army, attaining the rank of lieutenant. After the Armistice he attended the Uni-of Vienna. By 1938 he was an Oberstleutnant and director of the Army Institute of Science at Vienna. The army of Austria with Germany brought him degradation and loss of the army rank. He was given the rank of "honorary major" of the anti-aircraft "Volkswehr" and "honorary" of blood for his father was a Jew. When Germany invaded Poland he was called back into the army - as a private.
He received positions from an old friend of his (later General) v. LAMONTE, Chief of the II, he was assigned and taken into the "Munich". By 1943 he rose to Major.

3. In April 1944 General LAMONTE was at the Russian border. He was headed by Kurt Fickner FICKNER, a very old of the family. Kurt Fickner's commission was to the Leitstelle II Sud-Ost with headquarters in Munich, where the headquarters of the "Munich" should be, but in accordance to Fickner's delicate health he was not able to remain at home, Vienna was chosen.

SECRET

Referat 1 was under Lt. PIFF, 2 under Lt. KOSLER, 3 under Lt. BRUGGEBOS.
 These Referats kept in touch (by radio) with the FAKs and FAKs working in the territories assigned to them and reported on the front Aufklarung Units.

12. The personnel of the Leitstelle was almost entirely composed of either anti-Nazis or just plain Army men who were ferocious to any politics. To be sure exceptions occurred, but they were people who were planted in the Leitstelle by the Nazis as a sort of "in-formers" (S-itsen, stool pigeons). The Leitstelle was considered to have been one of the most fully informed. He had two men loyal to him whom he used as "in-formers" for his contacts with Sturmfu BEMERCH of the Jagdverband 3 and Ost with Istuf V BEMERCH of Amt VII.

13. Subject claims that the "putsch" of 20 July was the work of Abwehr II, which he thinks is a proof of the anti-Nazi feeling prevailing in this organization. And the 10 members were almost all Army Abwehr men to whom the putsch was appealed. Among those who lost their lives as the aftermath of the putsch are the following:

Oberst Baron FURTH, of the OAB Abwehr II,
 Oberst MARCOVA, of the Leitstelle Sud-Ost,
 Oberst AMSTER, staff member of Leitstelle Sud-Ost, Oberst HANSEN, of the MII Amt.

14. This 20 July affair destroyed almost the whole Abwehr and particularly the Leitstelle II Sud-Ost, a newly created weaker member of the Abwehr. HANSEN and the MII took control of the Abwehr and the Leitstelle was closely supervised by WANKER of Amt VII.

15. In Oct 44 KOSLER took over the Leitstelle Sud-Ost. It was his opinion that it has outlived its usefulness and that it should be dissolved. Its place was to be taken by the newly created JAGDVERBAND. Had the war lasted a month longer the Leitstelle would have entirely disappeared.

16. The JAGDVERBAND was made up of strong bands, was to be entirely independent of either the Abwehr or the Army. Whereas the Army issued orders and assigned work to the Kommandos and troops of the Leitstelle - it was the duty as to activity of the JAGDVERBAND. The JAGDVERBAND was divided into 3 departments: 1. The JAGDVERBAND Sud-Ost, 2. The JAGDVERBAND Sud-West, 3. The JAGDVERBAND Sud-Nord.

DOCUMENTS RECEIVED IN OCT

17. Records on codes, frequencies and locations established in the Balkan area by the Kommandos and troops of the Leitstelle were kept at the Leitstelle. When in Oct 45 the REHA in Berlin ordered the Leitstelle to be dissolved, the records were sent to the REHA.

SECRET

By courier to the "super-Nazi" Major LOOS of Colonel FZERNER disregarded this direct order and sent out Hptm FZERNER with 19 enlisted men who were sent to the mountains. There have been plans to prevent it from here on. FZERNER's intention was to surprise the Americans. Consequently he sent out his troops (the 1st) to get in touch with the Intelligence Agency and inform them about it. But he was a traitor, but was saved when the Americans contacted FZERNER who located FIEDLER and BAUER, in turn, led to the documents.

21. OTHER COMMENTS MADE BY THE SUBJECT

- a) SS-Sturmabfuhrer Dr. HOTIL of VI c has made statements to the effect that he had "some kind of game to play when the Americans finally arrive". It was known that he made some mysterious trips toward the Swiss border.
- b) Hptm. WITZEL, native of CRACOW, Poland, cover name "Hptm. KIRN" and member of FAK 202, has been at ~~some~~ time parachuted into the Russian held territory to work with the Ukrainian Separatist Movement. He has a good knowledge of the Ukrainians' dissatisfaction with the Soviet.
- c) Among Fechner's personal friends is a Herr ARNOLDI, of the Vienna Resistance Movement. Fechner has supplied ARNOLDI with weapons and information. The liaison between the two men was maintained by Lt. NOVAK, member of the Leitstelle II, S-O.
- d) Another friend of his is a leader of the Austrian Resistance Movement, Baron Alfred ROTH.

22. COMMENT

FECHNER is intelligent, well-informed, and cooperative. Unfortunately his state of health is very delicate. He badly needs immediate and general-hospital-type medical attention.

The territory which he knows well and where he has worked is now in the Third Army Area.

Therefore it was considered advisable to transfer him from the 11th Evac. Hospital at Augsburg to the Third Army Intelligence Center in Freising. He is now in a civilian hospital (under Army control). And he can be interrogated by the SC people at Freising, as soon as his health permits.
